Head of Development

(we are hiring, too)

pimcore

- Since 2010
- OpenSource / BSD license
- Austrian company elements.at
- ExtJS backend
- Zend Framework 1 based

Features

- Responsive UI
- WYSIWYG, image manipulation
- Drag & drop
- L10n (Frontend/Backend + GUI)
- Versioning
- User / roles / permissions

Under the hood

- Image / video processing pipelines
- DB/UI designer, PHP code generation
- Extensible plugin system
- Caching / optimizing output
- Multi-site capable
- Interfaces: WebDAV, SOAP, CSV, GA

Structure

- 1. Documents Pages
- 2. Assets Files, images
- 3. Objects Database records

4. Properties

"sounds cool."

not entirely.

(there is no silver bullet)

No frontend components.

... but:

- Zend Framework MVC
- PHP views + view helpers
- Simple elements:
 - o text, image, textarea, link
- loops, re-usable blocks

Example: Template - "Editables"

    <?= $this->image("logoImage") ?>

    <?= $this->textarea("contentText") ?>

UI / Objects / Database designer

- Define forms easy like "Access"
- "PhpMyAdmin on steroids"
- Auto-generated ORM PHP code

- Weird structure "object_12"
- De-normalized, missing indexes
- Filesystem dependencies

#FAIL

Filesystem-driven

=> collaborative development is hard

Sequence-ID vs. GUID

=> content migration pain

DB structure, strongly de-normalized

=> performance penalties
